Columbia Center

Seattle, WA

Standing at a staggering 933ft, Columbia Center has remained the jewel of the Seattle skyline since its construction in 1985. While other skyscrapers have eclipsed its West Coast height record, the tower still boasts the highest public viewing area this side of the Mississippi River.

Pantages Theater

Tacoma, WA

Blending classically ornate Renaissance Revival style architecture with the more practical and utilitarian Chicago style, the Pantages Theater in Tacoma, built in 1918, perfectly encapsulates turn of the century civic design.

Leonard Round Barn

Pullman, WA

While a novelty these days, circular barns were at one point thought to be more efficient and economical than their traditional counterparts. Raised in 1917, the Leonard Barn still stands today thanks in no small part to the dedication of local historical preservation advocates.

Museum of Glass

Tacoma, WA

Due to the Pacific Northwest's prominent relation to the studio glass movement and the artists associated with the craft, most notably Dale Chihuly, the Museum of Glass was developed in the late 90s as a testament to glass blowing and a showcase of its enduring beauty.

Cedar Creek Grist Mill Museum

Woodland, WA

Visiting the Cedar Creek Grist Mill is like taking a step back in time. Originally built in 1876, the mill fell into disuse and disrepair until being fully restored in the 1980s. Today the mill operates as it once did and offers a unique, unspoiled view into the past.

Paradise Inn

Mount Rainier National Park, WA

Sitting on the southern slope of Mount Rainier, Paradise Inn plays host to thousands of national park visitors each year. The hotel was erected to the specifications of National Park Service rustic architecture, a style which seeks to create buildings harmonized with the natural environment.

Fort Vancouver National Historical Site

Vancouver, WA

A 19th Century fur trading post for Hudson's Bay Company, Fort Vancouver was one of the first European settlements in what would become Washington State. Located on the northern bank of the Columbia River, the fort was an integral part of trade networks between Europe and Asia.

Masonic Temple Freemason Egyption Style Temple Columns Yakima, WA

The Masonic Lodge of Yakima was first granted a charter back in 1874 but didn't build their temple until 37 years later. Modeled after Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem, the building stood at the time of its construction as the tallest man-made structure between Seattle and Spokane.

Monroe Street Bridge

Spokane, WA

Upon construction, the Monroe Street Bridge was the biggest concrete arch bridge in the United States and one of the largest in the world. This engineering marvel was designed using the Rocky River Bridge in Cleveland, Ohio as a model, surpassing the older bridge in size by one foot.

Masonic Temple

Des Moines, WA

Unfortunately, this Washington State landmark has been slated for demolition. While there remains a chance of sparing the 1926 Masonic Temple from the wrath of the wrecking ball, the overwhelming cost of refurbishment may have sealed its fate.

Hing Hay Park

Seattle, WA

Nestled in the middle of the bustling International District in downtown Seattle, Hing Hay Park has served as a community hub for decades. Built utilizing the sacred principles of feng shui, the park's communal atmosphere lends itself to a round of chess or a game of ping pong.
